

The Best Free and Cheap Things to Do in May Across the U.S.

Tom Jones

HARRIET BASKAS APRIL 27, 2018

For Mother's Day, you may want to get in the car, hop on a plane, or bike it across town to visit your mom, bring her flowers, and take her to brunch. But during the rest of month, consider enjoying the free festivals taking place in Seattle, Atlanta, Philadelphia, or Augusta.

Here's a sampling of some of the free, cheap and cool attractions happening around the country in May.

Artisphere in Greenville

Greenville, South Carolina, will holds its 14th annual Artisphere festival May 11–13 with more than 250 artists and performers in attendance from around the world. During the free, three-day celebration, more than 100 artists will exhibit their work along a pop-up "Artist's Row" on Main Street while others will presents dozens of live music, theater, dance and art performances.